

Dear Ramsay,

Congratulations on the publication of your latest!

Nothing short of your traditional eloquence and abundant knowledge, you have written yet another excellent narrative that offers thought provoking insights and intriguing histories that will undoubtedly raise both eyebrows and bars.

As an old time friend and partner, I have always been fascinated with the tales you tell and the original deductions you constantly manage to coin. This is another "truth well told".

I found The Right Not To Remain Silent to be an excellent reminder to look on a perplexing side of our daily challenges as communicators and people of the media, and as audience. Should justice talk outside the courtroom, and can media be the partner-in-law?

The question is undoubtedly hard; but the answer seemed simple, or so you valiantly made it to be.

I look forward to reading your next.

Warmest wishes,

Eli
